日常生活的秩序和形式——法律與宗教
by Prof. FU Jingkun

Professor of Law
Shenzhen University, China

FU Jingkun received her Bachelor's degree from Beijing University in 1988 and her Ph.D in Law from the Chinese Academy of Social Science in Beijing, 1996. She then received a postdoctoral fellowship from Wuhan University till 1998, when she began her teaching in Shenzhen University.

She's now a professor of law and her interest mainly focuses on civil law. Her writings cover a lot of areas of private law. Her doctoral thesis was under the title of Contract Law in the Twentieth Century, which was later published by the Law Press China in 1997 and was awarded a Qian Duansheng Legal Study Prize in 2008. Her postdoctoral thesis was under the title of On the Law of Conflicts, which was also published by the Law Press China in 1999 and awarded a governmental prize by the City of Shenzhen in 2001.

She later turned to the study of the general part of the civil law, and published a series of text books. Her latest book is On the Interdisciplinary Study of the Civil Law, which was published by Zhongshan University Press in 2015. She also received other honors including the Outstanding Teacher's Prize issued by the government of Shenzhen.
